

Dear Resident:

In Roseville, maintaining our neighborhoods is a top priority. The citizen-led Imagine Roseville 2025 Report identified it as one of its top goals, and this was a key concern stressed at neighborhood meetings.

Over the years, residents have developed the City Code as an agreed upon set of guidelines and standards for appearance and upkeep of homes and yards. Well-kept homes maintain their value and keep your neighborhood a desirable place to live.

Not many people read the City Code and may not be aware of the guidelines and standards. This brochure highlights some of the most often cited parts of the Property Maintenance Code. Please review this brochure so you know how to protect your investment in your home and neighborhood.

Frequently Asked Questions

Where can I park a boat?

Boats on trailers may be stored in a side or backyard area and need not be on a hard surface. Boats on trailers, which are under 20' in length, may also be parked/stored on front yard driveways.

Do notices of City Code violations include a fine?

No. Notices are simply a reminder that something needs to be corrected on a property. These are not tickets or citations and do not include fines. A fine is a possibility if corrections are not completed or there is a history of multiple violations.

Can I store firewood in my driveway?

No. Roseville City Code only allows outside storage of firewood in a side or rear yard, neatly stacked 6" off the ground and limited to 6' in height.

My neighbor has an old car in his backyard that doesn't run and is an eyesore. Is this allowed?

All vehicles must be licensed, in operable condition and parked on an improved driveway surface. Cars or trucks stored on the grass is a violation of City Code. Vehicles in any condition are allowed if parked inside a garage out of public view.

Can I store materials or equipment for my home-based business in my back yard?

Home occupations are regulated by Roseville's Zoning Ordinance. Storage of business equipment (materials or vehicles) is not allowed on residential property. Please see Section 1011.12.B.3 of Roseville's Zoning Ordinance which regulates Home Occupations.

Can I store odds and ends behind my garage if I cover them with a tarp so they can't be seen?

No. Roseville's City Code does not allow outside storage of household items, construction materials, car parts or unusable equipment, etc., even if it is covered by a tarp. Some residents have placed items behind a garage or shed out of their own view but in view of neighbors. This often generates complaints to the City.

Can I expand my driveway using rock or gravel instead of asphalt?

No. Driveway areas used for the parking of vehicles are required by City Code to be asphalt, concrete or pavers. This eliminates silt erosion into storm sewers and dust. A permit is required to replace or expand a driveway.

Can I store a trailer in my driveway?

Trailers up to 3,000 pound capacity may be stored in driveways for up to 3 days and then must be removed. These types of trailers may, however, be stored in side and backyards with no time limitations.
